

United States of America Job Losses of 2008

Job loss is spiraling out of control in the United States. Some reasons for this is that some companies can't afford to stay open because they either don't get enough consumers to buy their products or they just can't keep up with the economy and get in debt. Others believe that by letting some of their workers go they will get more income to keep the business going. Overall the main reason most jobs are being cut is because not enough money being circulated around for businesses to afford to have a lot of employees.

Aldin Hamzic, 12/09/08

